I. SOURCE

A. Reference

For description and vital statistics on Rudolf TILL, see Preliminary Information Report.

B. Abwehr Activities

In connection with the following report, it should be mentioned that Source was first assigned to Abteilung III C, AST Vienna, and was then transferred to Abteilung III C, AST Saloniki, and while thus employed, was able to gather some detailed information on the organization and personnel of these Abwehrstellen.

II. MILITARY CAREER

Source served in World War I as a second lieutenant from 1915 till 1918. After his discharge in October 1918, he returned to his position as a teacher in a Public School in Vienna XXI. Later he taught history and German in various high schools in Vienna.

On 4 April 1941 Source was recalled into the service, keeping his World War I rank of Lt. d. Res. He was assigned to Abteilung III C 2 of Abwehrstelle Wien, for the purpose of learning Abwehr administration.

In October 1941 Source was transferred to Abteilung III C of AST Saloniki. In February 1942 he became administrative officer and, consequently, was promoted to Hauptmann d. Res. in July 1942. His duties in Saloniki, though primarily administrative, often brought him into direct contact with certain Abwehr agents.

In the beginning of October 1943 Source returned to Vienna, where he was assigned to the "Durchlassche instelle der Wehrmacht No. 36", an office which furnished travel permits to military personnel on orders. On 4 April 1945 he was transferred from there to the "Frontleitstelle Wien", which sent him to the "Frontleitersatzstelle Wien", which, in turn, placed him at the disposal of the "Kommandeur der Wehrmachtordnungstruppen". For a short time he was on duty as auxiliary M.P. officer in Enns and Wels, Upper Austria.

After the armistice had been declared, Source took up residence in Kematen an der Krems, Upper Austria. On 4 June 1945 he reported to Camp Lambach to be discharged. However, since his name appeared on 3rd Army "Wanted Personality List", he was detained there. He received a formal arrest notice in Camp Peuerbach on 10 October 1945.

III. ABTEILUNG III, AST VIENNA

A. Function

Abteilung III of AST Vienna was charged with far-reaching counter-espionage operations. Since the boundaries of the zones of operation of the various AST's were not clearly outlined and often overlapped, it is not possible to define the extent of the operations of AST Vienna. AST Vienna had agents in Budapest, Sofia, Belgrade, and in other locations. It was the Leitstelle for southeastern Europe and as such had jurisdiction over all Balkan AST's.

B. Organization

Having been organized very carefully, AST Vienna, commanded by Oberst Graf MAROGNA-REDWITZ, was one of the Abwehr's most efficient Abwehrstellen. Abteilung III, then headed by Oberstleutnant HINTER-MAYER was staffed for the most part with experienced Abwehr personnel. (See chart. See also CSDIC/CMF/SD92, CI-CIR/13 and 1 SC/CSDIC/SD33).

IV. AST SALONIKI

A. Function

AST Saloniki's mission was to gather information on Greece, Turkey, and Bulgaria. It reported on Partisan movements in Greece, Allied movements in the Near East, and Communist activities in Greece and Bulgaria.

B. Organization

AST Saloniki was last commanded by Oberstleutnant KLINGUELLER. The AST employed a great number of agents and VI-Leute, who performed all phases of intelligence activity. It had Aussenstellen in Dimotika, Mytilene, and Chios. On 1 October 1943 AST Saloniki was disbanded and reorganized into Abwehr Kommandos. (See chart. See also USEFET Report CI-CIR/13 and CSDIC/SC/15 AG/SD 25.)
C. Abwehr Agents

All agents and V-Leute in Saloniki were supervised by Hauptmann Ernst RIPKE. There were three main agents, whose office he had to visit periodically. The principal agent was a Greek named NIKOLAIDES, who was charged with the procurement of information on communist activities. He employed a number of V-Leute, who operated throughout Greece.

A second reliable agent was a Greek leather-merchant, PAPANAUN. His wife, a German woman, exerted great influence over him. He, too, employed a great number of V-Leute, who were active mostly in government departments and industrial enterprises.

The third agent was the Greek DINAS, a man of criminal inclinations. His most bitter enemy was PAPANAUN, who commented, more than once, that Germany did not need to work with such a hoodlum. DINAS had his informants in the Greek lowlands. He was charged with getting information on Partisan movements.

While RIPKE was on leave in December 1941, Source was placed in charge of these agents for a short time. He did not, however, meet any of their V-Leute. One day, during this time, Source was called to Sekretar PAULUS of the German consulate and introduced to a man who had been supposedly a Greek officer. RIPKE, who had employed him previously, had called him "V-Mann 4". His real name was never known by Source. This man's reports on Partisan movements, formations, and equipment were so exaggerated, however, that his services were soon discontinued. After the disbanding of AOST in Saloniki, most of the agents were no longer needed. NIKOLAIDES, DINAS, and PAPANAUN, however, because of their services were brought into Austria early in 1944 by Oberleutnant NOEBLING, who became RIPKE's successor.
